

Cultural Humility and Unconscious Bias in Healthcare

Program Overview

The increase in diversity of the US population is reflected in patients being treated by healthcare professionals (Marcelin et al., 2019). Patients from historically marginalized groups can experience unconscious biases which effect patient-clinician interactions and serve to perpetuate health inequities (Edgoose et al., 2019 & Marcelin et al., 2019). This course will examine cultural humility and unconscious bias in healthcare and explore how these two items intersect with the goal of health equity for all.
